

Frankfort School Band Plays At Fair

Several Hundred People Accompany 46 Piece Band to Fair Grounds

Last Sunday, October 29th, will always stand out as a red letter day for the people of Frankfort and the immediate surrounding territory for on that day the Frankfort School Band had the honor and privilege of playing at the great World's Fair in Chicago, which closed Wednesday night. The members of the band were in high glee when the news came that the famous Colonial Village had sponsored them. Not only were the band members, their instructor, Mr. Robert Wight, Principal A. Hill highly pleased, but the entire Frankfort territory was happy that their band was to play at the World's Fair.

John Lühring, cashier of the Frankfort State Bank, and H. J. Lambrecht, well known insurance man of Frankfort were in charge of arrangements and transportation.

Two coaches were reserved for the band and those who wished to go with the band on the Illinois Central electric train leaving Matteson at 11:49 a. m.

Arriving at Matteson the tickets were ready and in addition to the 46 members of the band and the six girl color bearers, 175 people from Frankfort and vicinity also boarded this train, which arrived at the 31st street entrance of the Fair about 1 o'clock.

The band was met by members of the American Legion who escorted the band inside the Fair grounds.

The band played their first selections at the American Legion headquarters on the Fair grounds.

From here they marched to five other concessions and played. The concessions were: The Bowery, The Lincoln Group, Fort Dearborn, The English Village and the Colonial Village. The band played in a concert at this Village about 4:30 p. m. The opening number was played at the Village gates following which they marched to the village green before the replica of Mount Vernon. Here a spirited band program was presented before a large group of Fair visitors. The only thing which marred the otherwise perfect day, was a bitter cold wind off the lake which made the band boys shiver.

At the conclusion of the program, the band boys attended a Colonial Day show entitled "Bundling".

Many other interesting sights also were enjoyed. The band had been invited to play at the Belgium Village and several other places, but owing to the cold and lateness of the hour, could not accept.

In addition to the people who accompanied the band on the train, many others drove to the Fair in their automobiles so that it is estimated that fully 250 people from Frankfort and vicinity saw and heard the band at the Fair.

The band is only about a year old and has done splendidly during this time and this experience of playing at the famous Century of Progress is one they will remember for the rest of their days.

The band is to be complimented for their excellent showing despite the adverse weather conditions and Frankfort is to be congratulated for having such a fine musical organization. Mr. Wight, the able director of the band must not be overlooked, and he too, is to be complimented on the excellent results he has had with this organization.

Frankfort is certainly justified in feeling proud over the honors which have come to it and its band.

Mokena Halloweeners Put Town In Darkness

Altho the youngsters of Mokena had been placed on their honor by the village board relative to destroying property on Halloween, the boys could not resist getting into mischief and as a result a number of windows were broken. The electric street lights were tampered with resulting in the entire street lighting system going out, plunging the entire village in darkness. The Public Service Company sent out the repair crews and soon restored the street lighting service.

A number of other stunts were carried out, but not as much destruction of property was reported as in other years.

Tinley Boy Hit By Automobile

Louis, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hermismeyer of Tinley Park, had a very narrow escape from serious injury, when he was struck by an automobile of Dr. Davis of Chicago who has a summer home at the Lincoln Estates.

The accident occurred about five o'clock Tuesday evening on Oak Park avenue near the Hermismeyer place. The boy saw the car approaching as he was trying to cross the street and becoming confused ran in front of the car. The fender struck him in the side and knocked him down. Despite the fact that the force of the impact pulled the laces out of his shoes, he only suffered a severe bruise on his side and leg.

The car was immediately stopped and Dr. Davis gave first aid treatment. Wednesday Louis resumed his studies at school, apparently none the worse for his close call.

Republicans And Chicago Trib Panned By Democrats

A rousing Democratic rally was held at the St. Mary Hall in Mokena Tuesday night. Judge Cornelius Sullivan of Joliet was the chief speaker of the evening. He castigated the Republicans for failure to cooperate with the present administration. He also turned his oratorical guns on the Chicago Tribune which he bitterly denounced for opposing the Rooseveltian policies and declared that the Tribune is poisoning the minds of the American people.

Judge Sullivan reviewed the various plans as adopted by the Democratic party. He pointed out that the CCC took thousands of young men off the streets, gave them healthful jobs and saved the government millions of dollars in preventing costly forest fires.

The NRA was hailed as the one agency that abolished child labor and increased wages.

The money question was also given much attention. The speaker declared that as 44 other nations were on a silver basis, this country had to go off the gold standard as there is not enough gold to go around and as long as the credit system is in use with foreign nations we had to go on a silver basis as there is not enough gold to carry on trade. He lauded Wm. Jennings Bryan and his principles and recalled Bryan's famous "Cross of Gold" speech delivered over 38 years ago.

Next Judge Sullivan turned his attention to the matter of the freedom of the press, which he said had never been endangered by the present administration. He pointed out that the great metropolitan papers are controlled by the capitalists and declared that they only print one side of an issue. He bitterly denounced the capitalistic system. He said the Republicans are using as their slogan "Back to the Constitution". He pointed out that it was a Democrat, Thomas Jefferson who gave us the Constitution and that the Democratic party has never turned its back on it.

Judge Sullivan scored the Republican party for not looking after the interests of agriculture. He said in the Hoover administration millions were loaned to railroads and big corporations while the farmer was dispossessed when he could not pay his mortgage. But now, he pointed out, the Democrats have come to the relief of the distressed farmer thru the Home Owners Loan Corporation which enables the farmer to save his farm. Prices of corn under the Hoover regime were down to 9c a bushel, while now under the Roosevelt administration corn prices have hit the 75c mark, the speaker continued. Judge Sullivan said he advocated the conscription of wealth. He also touched on the world war and declared the United States was forced into the war by the capitalists and the houses of Rothschild and Morgan.

Judge Sullivan urged his hearers to vote "yes" on the revision of the Illinois Constitution, saying that it has been in use for 64 years and needs revision. He pointed out that we have outgrown the horse and buggy area of the Constitution and need a constitution befitting the present Ford V8 days.

Gordon Breen spoke in behalf of his father, Michael Breen, candidate for sheriff. When Mr. Breen's name was mentioned, the crowd cheered loudly.

Conrad Wirth, Democratic candidate for county treasurer was present and made a few brief remarks. Matt Hartford of Joliet spoke for Henry Koerner, Democratic candidate for county clerk.

A Chicago entertainer and Alvin Kohl furnished entertainment and music.

Refreshments were served.

It would be as smart as Paris in black with crystal buttons and a white satin knot at the throat. Or perhaps you would prefer it in crepe morocain

In the warm new shade called "clay rust."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

For the first time since the federal reserve system was created a very real rift has developed between the federal reserve board and the federal advisory council, that group of business leaders which is supposed to act as intermediary between the reserve board and the public. The line of cleavage has developed over gold. How far it may go in disturbing faith in the federal reserve system as a banking structure it is yet too early to tell, but I find in many quarters frequent questions as to the indication that politics may be creeping into government supervision of the country's largest banking unit, the federal reserve system.

The controversy had its origin in a statement of views delivered to the reserve board by the advisory council last month. Of course, the advisory council has no power and can only function in accordance with its name and give suggestions to the reserve board. Its influence nevertheless heretofore always has been an important factor in federal supervision of bank policies and any wide difference of opinion between the advisory council and the reserve board naturally is an influential factor in financial conditions.

The reserve board did not enjoy the statement of views from the advisory council, which was to the effect that "no real or permanent recovery" can be hoped for until the federal government returns to the gold standard for our currency. It said unequivocally that the currency and credit supply now existing is ample for all needs and that business cannot be expected to go forward until it has some assurance of a permanency in our currency. In other words, the advisory council takes no stock in the "baloney dollar" which has been so strongly advocated by Prof. George F. Warren, one of the important brain trust advisors to the President.

In addition to the council's criticism of the currency policy of the administration, it did not pull its punches with respect to the countless governmental experiments in business. I quote that paragraph of its statement: "A serious factor of rapidly increasing importance is the tendency of business enterprises directly conducted by government agencies to reach out further and further into fields heretofore occupied by private capital, thereby destroying taxable values. The use of government money in competition with private business is not only paralyzing to private initiative but experience has amply demonstrated that it is costly, generally inefficient, and that its disastrous effects reach far beyond the limitation of the particular industry immediately affected."

The council had much more to say respecting other policies of the present administration, including what it described as a constant "threat of inflation," a condition that the council felt was stifling personal thrift. It asked directly whether there was any inducement for an individual to save or to buy life insurance and preserve earnings against the time when age will prevent continued production of income if there was an overhanging threat that all these savings may be wiped out by uncontrolled inflation of the currency.

Obviously, the federal reserve board was wrought up when the advisory council did the unusual thing of making public its views. Although the council withheld its statement until three weeks after the meeting at which it was drafted and given the reserve board, that lapse of time did not save the feeling of the board.

To show how it felt about the action of the advisory council, the board very promptly met and adopted a resolution by unanimous vote returning the council's statement to its secretary. This "spanking" has aroused a great many business leaders who have expressed fears that politics now is permeating the two federal agencies, for the advisory council is a body created by statute just as much as the federal reserve board. No one can tell what the outcropping of this situation may be. There are a number of men in the advisory council membership who have been outspoken in their support of President Roosevelt. Likewise, the President has named two members of the present reserve board, and one or two others of that group of seven are entirely in harmony with his economic policies. Consequently, there is much talk in Washington that the two schools of economic thought are engaged in a clash that may be serious in its effect on the supervision of the country's banking structure.

Whatever may be the attitude of the reserve board, I have found a considerable body of opinion holding that the advisory council was functioning within its rights.

In its own sphere when it made the statement to the board. As explained above, the board was under no compunction to abide by the expressions from the advisory council, and if it elected to do so it could allow the council's views to be pigeon-holed and forgotten. But the point is that the council is representative of business and financial interests and therefore, when it considered federal policies it was speaking for that segment of our national life which otherwise had no means of making itself vocal, according to much opinion in the National Capital.

Further, the fact that the council took direct issue with the administration is being regarded in many quarters as a healthy sign. I believe there is no dispute about the right of individuals or groups to criticize the political party responsible for government management at any time and if the particular part of our commerce and industry, represented by the advisory council, feels dissatisfied with the gold policy, with the unbalanced budget, with the continual spending and experiments that have gone on, there is a great number of people who insist those views should be disclosed. Some students of economy and government here hold to the opinion that such expressions may have a tendency to lead to policies acceptable to both sides.

This phase of the situation may be linked to the efforts which the administration has been making to accomplish an understanding with some important business leaders through frequent conferences at the White House and through informal and indirect meetings outside of Washington. I refer to the dinners and meetings which have been held, many in New York, by Prof. Raymond Moley, formerly the number one member of the brain trust but now a magazine editor. Although White House sources deny any part in the Moley dinners, most Washington observers accept the denial with a grain of salt. They are convinced that Mr. Roosevelt is fully informed of the views expressed by individual business leaders in those meetings and that he is seeking some basis of understanding with business. It takes no stretch of the imagination then to connect these various happenings, despite the wounded feelings of the federal reserve board.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, said the other day he anticipated little in the making of it. Losing Fight crease in Republican membership in the house of representatives. He can see no method, he said, of defeating the disbursement of cash that has been going on in the Roosevelt administration.

The Republican chairman's statement followed compilation by the Democratic national committee of figures showing the amount of cash that has been paid out by the government through its various channels since President Roosevelt took the reins. The Democratic committee compiled a list of states and set off against each state the amount of money distributed therein for relief, agricultural benefits, public works construction and otherwise. Democratic campaigners were not invited to use these figures but Chairman Fletcher insisted that was the basis and the real reason for their compilation. Mr. Fletcher proved his statement with hands full of clippings gathered from newspapers throughout the country, each one quoting some Democratic candidate who had informed an audience as to the benefactions of the federal government in that particular state.

The Republican chairman told newspaper correspondents in a press conference that he was not accusing the Roosevelt administration of buying votes but he added with candor that votes naturally were going to go towards the source of money supplied. With several billions being distributed and a considerable amount being turned loose within the last month, Mr. Fletcher made a clean breast of his feelings that it was difficult to battle Santa Claus.

In connection with the Republican charges over cash distribution both of the national committees have been compiling statistics respecting registration of voters through the country in preparation for the election. These reports indicate that public interest is aroused far beyond the usual condition. Voters are awakened to the importance of these elections.

Obviously, there are many local issues to be fought out and settled by the ballot. The situation in California is illustrative of this. Never before, I am told, has California seen such a registration list as is made up there in anticipation of the vote on Upton Sinclair's program to "eliminate poverty in California."

Agricultural areas, according to the registration lists, are prepared to support or upset policies of the agricultural adjustment administration and some industrial centers show figures indicating widespread interest in the vote that is naturally to have a bearing on the status of the national recovery administration. Many astute politicians are saying that the great registration makes guesses as to the outcome rather hazardous, while the students of government welcome the large polling lists as encouraging evidence of an awakened interest among the populace in this thing we call government.

It is proof, they say, that, whether right or wrong, more voters want their feeling known in the current election than hitherto has been the case except when the ballot involved the Presidential.

HOW TO SHOOT

By Bob Nichols

Shooting Editor, Field and Stream

UNTIL a gunner learns to shoot with both eyes open he can never be rated a first-class upland field shot. You cannot accurately judge angle, speed, or distance, with one eye closed. Nature gave you two eyes for exactly this reason. Even if it handicapped you in no other way, squinting one eye tight shut when shooting introduces a certain amount of muscular and nervous strain that certainly adds nothing whatever to your speed or accuracy.

With one eye closed you are immediately deprived of the advantages of "universal focus" which is so necessary to quick and accurate gun pointing. You do not see everything in your field of vision. Your one-eyed vision is too intently concentrated on the flying target. A sudden swerve or dip, such as is characteristic in the flight of the woodcock and the jack-snipe, will almost certainly fool you into a miss.

With both eyes wide open, not focused too intently on any particular object, you are alertly aware of everything that moves and everything that happens. If the game darts to right or left from its initial line of flight, you are so instantly aware of the change that you shift your gun pointing with lightning-like speed. All of which frequently means the difference between a clean kill and an exasperating miss.

Quite frequently you will find the "one-eyed" shot a slow shot. The sudden elimination of 50 per cent of his eyesight, on the rise of the bird, makes it necessary for his single-aiming eye to take extra time to adjust itself to carrying all the burden of watching game and gun. The good two-eyed shot will have the game down dead before Mr. One-Eye can let off his gun. The man who closes one eye is at his best where the shooting is in the clear open spaces. But let him flush his quail or grouse in the woods, or in dense brambled thickets, and there he begins to get into difficulties that are quite often beyond him. I have seen a two-eyed shot shooting a pump gun on quail knock down three birds on a rise of the covey, and yet with all this would be able to tell where most of the remaining birds went. Let the squint-eyed shot, wedded to his idols, try to accomplish this!

Learning to shoot with both eyes open is particularly difficult if you have the misfortune not to have your "master" eye on your gun side. I have been through this and can speak with experience. A right-handed shot, my "master" or controlling eye happens to be on the left. The English gun makers try to make allowance for this, in fitting a gun to a shooter, by supplying what is called a "cast-off" stock. That is, the stock is bent in its vertical plane so as to bring the breech of the gun in nearer to the middle of a man's face, or nearer to the sighting line of the "master eye." This does help to a certain extent, although I personally feel that a stock so bent is likely to prove something of an interference to quick, instinctive gun pointing.

The partial cure I suggest is to shorten the stock somewhat below its normal length of about 14 inches. My own favorite stock is just exactly 13 1/2 inches. With this shortened stock I can bring the butt clear in to my shoulder where the base of my neck will prevent it from coming any farther in. Then I cut my comb down somewhat until I can get most of my jaw-bone pretty well over the top of it. With the gun in this position I can use both eyes wide open without tilting my head too far over to the right in aiming. In my opinion the head should not be tilted over any how. Angles, speeds and distances are best and most accurately estimated with the head erect—the normal position in which you are accustomed in the ordinary ways of life to look at anything.

In any event, whether your "master" eye is on your gun side or not, seat your gun butt clean in on your shoulder as far as it will go when mounting your gun. There it will have the solid support of your body. Many shooters catch the butt on the upper part of their arm—a moving support—and this causes many an otherwise unexplainable miss.

Cumaean Sibyl Sanctuary as Described by Virgil

The 2,500-year-old sanctuary of the Cumaean Sibyl has been found at Cuma, near Naples, after 1,200 years of conjecture and several hundred years of search, says a writer in the Montreal Herald. Within the sanctuary is the private rough-hewn chamber wherein the Sibyl offered her predictions on the fate of Rome. The surroundings are exactly as described by Virgil in the sixth book of the Aeneid.

Evidence has also been brought to light that the sanctuary was used in the first century of the Christian era as the refuge and burial place of Christians. The discovery is the result of four years' survey and exploration by Professor Majuri—already renowned for his work at Herculaneum and Pompeii. Happening by chance on an unexpected clew, some time ago Professor Majuri began secret excavations which have led to these revelations.

FIND ADVENTURE IN PROFUSION IN WILDS OF PAPUA

Exciting tales of adventure in the wilds of Papua are told in the annual report of Sir Hubert Murray, the lieutenant-governor of that district, to the Australian government.

He tells of the discovery of pigmy tribes of amazing strength, whose language is like the chattering of parrots; of strange burial customs among the pigmy cannibals; of dangerous ascents of wild mountain peaks where savages live; of a casual murderer who killed the wrong man; and of humorous incidents in native courts over which he has presided.

One story he tells shows that the kindness of white men is not always appreciated by the natives. After an attack by natives upon the camp of a patrol officer had been driven off, a native baby and a wounded warrior were found in the bush. The baby was cared for and the warrior restored to health. Then both were returned to their tribe. Soon afterwards a second attack was made by the same tribe on the patrol officer's camp. After this had been repelled the officer counted 153 arrows embedded in his boxes, tents and the surrounding ground.

These natives, described by one patrol officer as "necessarily cannibals" because of the rugged nature of their territory, will eat anything, but consider frogs, prawns and beetles as particular delicacies. They bury their dead in a kind of cage six feet from the ground, and have a method of embalming unknown to white men.

Two miners, who made what Sir Hubert described in his report as "a really extraordinary journey" from New Guinea into Papua, reported having seen natives with "golden woolly hair." The lieutenant-governor stated that this was the first he had heard of such natives, although there are said to be golden-haired natives in New Britain.

Nixon Brings Tax Situation To Voters Attention By Radio

George F. Nixon of the board of Tax Appeals, Republican candidate for President and Member of the County Board, has launched a radio campaign over Station W. C. F. L. to bring the tax situation in Cook County directly to the attention of the voters between now and next Tuesday's election.

"The tax burden," Mr. Nixon declares, "is responsible in large measure for the continued unemployment of Cook County's 300,000 building tradesmen, for the continued distress among holders of defaulted real estate bonds, and for the rapidly growing distress among renters faced by rising rents and an acute housing shortage."

"The heavy tax burden imposed upon the public has resulted in virtual cessation of building operations. It is directly responsible for the holding up of many real estate reorganizations that might, otherwise, have resulted in relief to distressed bondholders. And because there is little or no building being done, we are facing a housing shortage that will result in rents entirely out of line with present day incomes."

Sunday night at 9:15 P. M. Nixon will point out the close relationship existing between high taxes and high prices, leading in turn to increased costs of government, which in turn result in still higher taxes -- a vicious circle to which, he says, the voter holds the only solution.

Monday evening, the night before election, Nixon will wind up his radio series with a general review at 6:00 P. M. urging taxpayers throughout Cook County to go to the polls the following day.

THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH
Without further comment, let us take note of the passing of time: George Washington: "In what part of the continent shall we find any man or body of men who would not blush to stand up and propose purposely calculated to rob the soldier of his stipend and the public creditor of his due? And were it possible that such a flagrant instance of injustice could ever happen, would it not excite the general indignation and tend to bring down upon the authors of such measures the aggravated vengeance of Heaven?"

Abraham Lincoln: "It is the duty of the country to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphans."

Theodore Roosevelt: "War veterans have a greater claim upon us than any other class of citizens."

Franklin D. Roosevelt: "No person because he wore a uniform, must thereafter be placed in a special class of beneficiaries over and above all other citizens."

In 1917 and 1918, the wearers of the uniform were a very special class. No one objected then. Four million men were doing 100 per cent of the fighting for a nation of one hundred and twenty millions. They were also set apart by the meagerness of their wage. At a time when factory or shipyard worker could earn from eight to fifteen dollars per day, when contractors were being let on a "cost plus 10 per cent basis," when profiteers were charging all the traffic would bear--private soldier was earning one dollar per day with ten cents extra for service in France.

It has been a traditional policy of the United States that no man who had served in the armed forces in time of war should ever be forced by age or disability to exist on charity. That has come to be considered a part of their compensation, a justification of the inadequacy of their wage.

Wars must be fought and the cost of wars must be paid. The contractors, the manufacturers of munitions, the railroads, the financiers, all these have been paid generously for their services. Our work is done. Will you now deny the debt?

We grant that to bear arms in the defense of one's country is a basic duty of citizenship. Does that mean that the fighting men should be penalized financially for doing duty? In industry, the more difficult and dangerous jobs earn corresponding rewards. We only ask for an even break with the men who did not serve.

In future wars, this inequality can be easily avoided. Pay what the job is worth! Give the soldier in camp a wage equivalent to what the worker on the outside earns. When he goes into the zone of operations where his risks and difficulties are multiplied, raise his pay to correspond to the equally dangerous occupations of civil life.

Twenty-seven guests were entertained on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Wm. E. Groves in honor of Miss Mildred Woodrich who was observing her birthday that day.

The honored guest was welcomed by a witch and her kittens with noise makers, etc., these being her three small cousins, Ruth Lowe, Marjorie and Conne Marti, who sang birthday greetings.

Games and stunts were the diversion of the evening.

At a late hour refreshments were served from a lovely decorated table covered with an Italian lace cloth. The center piece was yellow marigolds in an old silver bowl, with yellow and black tapers in silver candelabrum.

The honored guest received many beautiful gifts.

STATEMENTS AND SUGGESTIONS AS TO PUBLIC MEASURES

Pursuant to Statute, the following statements and suggestions have been prepared relative to the substance of the various public measures which will be presented to the voters of Will County at the general election to be held November 6th, 1934.

ALBION F. DELANDER, County Clerk.

Statement and Suggestions on the Proposition of Calling A Constitutional Convention.

By virtue of said joint resolution the question of calling a convention for the purpose of preparing a revision, alteration or amendments of the Constitution, as provided by Article XIV thereof, must be submitted to the electors of the State of Illinois at the general election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, A. D. 1934. If a majority of the electors voting at the election vote for such a convention it is required by said Article XIV of the Constitution that the General Assembly at its next session shall pass an Act calling such convention, designate the place of meeting, fix the day and hour of the same and make provision for and fix the pay of the delegates to the same, together with the other necessary expenses of such convention. It is provided by said Article XIV that said convention shall consist of double the number of members of the Senate to be elected in the same manner, at the same places and in the same districts.

The convention must meet within three months after such election, prepare such revision, alteration or amendments as may be deemed necessary and the same must be submitted to the electors for their ratification or rejection at an election called by the convention for that purpose, not less than two nor more than six months after the adjournment of the convention.

The question of calling a Constitutional Convention, to carry, must receive the affirmative votes of a majority of the electors voting at the general election to be held on the sixth day of November, A. D. 1934.

The question of calling a Constitutional Convention shall be submitted to the voters on the ballot containing the names of the candidates for office, as provided by section 16 of "An Act to provide for the printing and distribution of ballots at public expense, and for the nomination of candidates for public offices, to regulate the manner of holding elections, and to enforce the secrecy of the ballot," approved June 22, 1891, as amended, and shall be in the following form:

PROPOSITION TO CALL A CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

YES	Shall a convention be called to prepare a revision, alteration or amendments of the Constitution of the State of Illinois?
NO

Statement and Suggestions on the Act Providing for an Issue of Bonds of the State of Illinois for the Relief of Indigent Persons and for the Redemption of Notes Issued in Anticipation of Taxes Levied for That Purpose.

The Act providing for a bond issue of $30,000,000 is one of six Acts passed by the Fifty-eighth General Assembly at the first special session thereof in the program to provide immediate emergency relief to residents of the State of Illinois who by reason of UNEMPLOYMENT OR OTHERWISE WERE DESTITUTE AND IN NECESSITOUS CIRCUMSTANCES.

This legislation made available immediately, moneys for unemployment and poor relief by issuing tax anticipation notes against a State property tax which was levied for this purpose. But in order to prevent the collection of this heavy property tax, the Act being submitted provides for the issuance of bonds of the State of Illinois, the proceeds from the bonds to be used for the payment of the tax anticipation notes. The Act further provides that these bonds, and the interest thereon, shall be paid out of the allotment of money to the counties and municipalities located therein of the motor fuel (gasoline) tax. The amount so set aside from the allotment to any county and the municipalities located therein shall be in accordance with the provisions of the Motor Fuel Tax Law and all amendments thereof, and shall be in the same proportion that the relief furnished to persons in such county, from moneys appropriated by "An Act making an appropriation to the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission for the purpose of providing relief to the residents of the State of Illinois who are in necessitous circumstances," approved November 10, 1933, bears to the total relief furnished to persons in the State under said appropriation Act.

The money received from the sale of the tax anticipation notes has been spent. Funds to pay these notes can be obtained by either of two ways: (1) By a property tax upon all the taxable property of the State; or (2) By the proposed bond issue. A property tax will require approximately 60c on each $100.00 assessed valuation, and will be spread over the entire State. If the bond issue is approved there will be no property tax required to retire the anticipation notes issued to obtain money for unemployment relief. The anticipation notes will be paid with the proceeds of the bonds and the bonds will be paid from the counties' and municipalities' share of motor fuel tax. Each county and each municipality will pay only in the proportion it shared in the relief funds. No deduction will be made from the allotment of a county or municipality located therein, provided the county or the municipality did not receive any of the relief fund.

This Act will not become a law unless it receives a majority of the votes cast for members of the General Assembly at the election at which it is submitted.

The ballot to be used in submitting the question of the adoption of this Act by the electors of this State shall be printed separate and distinct from all other ballots used at the election and shall be substantially in the following form:

New Auto License Plates Must Be Displayed By Jan. 1

Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes this Monday started distribution of registration forms for 1935 automobile licenses in Illinois. First shipments of the application blanks were made to the city and county clerks, police, sheriffs, newspapers and various motor clubs throughout the state from which points they will be distributed to car owners. By special arrangement with oil companies, the license forms will also be distributed from thousands of filling stations and garages in cities and along the various state highways. The law requires car owners to display the 1935 license plates on January 1, Secretary Hughes stated. Plates will be released thru the mails and placed on sale "over the counter" on or about December 6 in Springfield. Heretofore license plates have not been issued until after Christmas. In order to expedite early delivery of license plates, Mr. Hughes urged motorists to fill out application forms immediately upon receipt, sending them to his office properly notarized, and accompanied by correct fees either in the form of certified check, draft, or money order. Posters especially designed by the state automobile department for the purpose of assisting car owners in correctly filling out application forms will be placed on display today throughout the state for public inspection. Car owners desiring reassignment of their 1934 numbers must make request and file their application thirty days prior to January 1, Sec. Hughes pointed out. Owners registering the same car must send their registration card along with the application for 1935 plates. Those registering new cars will be required to furnish the secretary of state's office with a bill of sale for the automobile department's official records. They must also apply for a certificate of title. Applicants for plates for newly acquired used cars must furnish evidence of ownership in the form of a properly endorsed certificate of title. Motorists whose cars are now registered in Illinois are not required to make application for a new certificate of title unless ownership of the car has been transferred and not recorded during the year. Incidentally since the title law went into effect the first of this year, Secretary Hughes declared that car thefts had been reduced more than 50 per cent.

Registration fees for pleasure cars range from $8.00 to $25.00, depending upon the horse power of the car. Truck fees are based on the gross weight of vehicle and range from $10.00 to $250.00 for the full year.

"Car owners can help speed up delivery of auto plates by strict compliance with all the provisions on the application form," said Secretary Hughes. "They can greatly expedite the work of this office by enclosing last year's registration card. These cards furnish ample proof of ownership."

"Our automobile department has no alternative, where application forms are incorrectly filled out, but to return them for proper execution."

Machinery for turning out the new license plates, registration cards, and certificates of title is ready to do the big job at top speed according to Mr. Hughes. He pointed out that there were many operations involved in receiving and checking applications, making photostats of the registration cards, and picking out and addressing the license plates. The numerals of the new plate are navy blue on a battleship gray background.

THINK IT OVER-TAXPAYERS

Can the taxpayers of Cook County afford to lose the services of the man who ordered a 15% cut in assessed values of all homes, two and three flat buildings?

Who led the fight for reduced 1932 taxes? Who inaugurated and now leads the fight for 1% tax limitation for all property on fair cash value?

Who recently secured in County Court, tax reduction for all property owners, because of illegal rates?

Who as a member of the Board of Appeals reorganized the office, and in two years granted individual hearings to more than 200,000 taxpayers, five times as many as heard by any previous board?

Who has now pledged to cut budgets by eliminating waste and extravagance?

Who has pledged unconditionally to the maintenance and development of every essential function of the County government, our schools, the proper care of the poor and sick, our law enforcing agencies, our health service and our recreational facilities?

Better Breakfasts

THE wise housewife knows that there are mornings when "he" doesn't feel like getting up. But it is imperative that "he" should get up in order to "bring home the bacon"—and we don't necessarily mean breakfast bacon. What does the wise housewife do when she is confronted by this morning lethargy? Does she call imperatively? No, she cooks! And she leaves "his" door ajar so that the fumes of coffee and the odor of cooking eggs will appeal to his senses of hearing and smell, rather than appealing to his conscience which may be somewhat sleepy at the moment. This is the sort of breakfast waiting for him:

Iced Melon
Cereal with Cream
Creamed Eggs on Toast
Preserves Coffee

Not much cooking, you see, but quite enough to get him out of bed if he is anything of an epicure. And here is the recipe for the Creamed Eggs on Toast: Make a white sauce of two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour and one and a half cups diluted evaporated milk, and season to taste with salt, pepper and paprika. Add one chopped canned pimiento, one tablespoon chopped parsley and five hard-cooked eggs cut in pieces. Serve on toast points. This serves four.

Fresh and Hot

The coffee, of course, must be fresh and hot. There's only one way to have it fresh and that is to buy one of the brands that come in the vacuum-packed cans which keep it fresh.

NEW DEAL NOTES

An indication of how many small homes have been saved for their owners in Illinois is found in the statement issued by the state manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation last week. He announced that more than one hundred million dollars has been paid out in Illinois to prevent foreclosures of small homes. This means that there are over fifteen thousand people in Illinois now in possession of their homes who would have been evicted if the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, one of President Roosevelt's projects, had not saved them.

Governor Henry Horner is an economical Governor. Under his administration the running expenses of State government have decreased drastically. General revenue fund disbursements have been as follows:

Fiscal Years Ended June 30
1929	$36,239,083
1930	40,354,817
1931	41,962,500
1932	39,074,316
1933	31,785,859
1934	30,219,483

This is one reason why your tax bills are lower this year.

Prosperous Farmers

Michael L. Igoe, Democratic candidate for Congressman-at-Large says in his speeches:

"The Republicans make much fun of the corn-hog program, but the laugh is on the other side. Anybody can realize that the farmer knows the difference between 15c corn and 75c corn; anybody can see the difference between $3.00 hogs and $8.00 hogs. The corn-hog program may be funny to some people, but it has put millions of dollars into the pockets of Illinois farmers."

The Literary Digest "recheck" poll apparently is not so accurate as its former polls. Only thirty-five thousand ballots were sent throughout the entire country, and only a small portion of these returned. The Maine election shows how far off the poll must be. The Digest recheck poll taken in Maine at the time of the election last month showed only 38% of the people in Maine favoring the New Deal, but Maine elected a Democratic governor, two Democratic Congressmen out of three, and almost elected a Democratic United States senator. If the poll in Illinois is as far off as it was in Maine, the Democrats will carry Illinois by six hundred thousand.

Martin A. Brennan, Democratic candidate for Congressman-at-Large, believes the paramount issue in this campaign is President Roosevelt's recovery program. Congressman Brennan has been an ardent supporter of the President throughout his term in Congress, and is pledged to continue this support when he goes back.

The ability with which John Stelle, Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, has conducted the affairs of the Auditor's Office in Springfield, is now bringing him results. Under Mr. Stelle's direction, the Auditor's Office has given courteous, prompt and efficient service to all comers, and the voters naturally realize that if Mr. Stelle is elected Treasurer, they will be given the same courteous and efficient treatment in that office.

How About England

An argument frequently heard is that England without an NRA is better off than the United States with the NRA. An article in the Literary Digest on October 13 definitely settles this argument. Britain, the article shows, has at least three million people out of jobs. This is about one in fourteen of the whole population—as bad, if not worse, than the American figures. Also, the taxes in Great Britain are so stupendous that Americans can really thank themselves that our taxes are so low. In the United States, a married man with an income of $2,000 a year pays no tax on it; in England a married man with an income of $2,000 pays 22½ percent of that income to the government. Local taxation is fully as high as in America. Indirect taxes are even higher. The gas tax, for instance, is 16c a gallon in England.

These figures show that while Britain is more prosperous than it was two years ago, it still is not as prosperous as the United States is under Roosevelt.

School Teachers Know

A decided swing of sentiment among school teachers and officials of parent teachers associations toward John A. Wieland, Democratic candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, is under way. Mr. Wieland is young, vigorous and thoroughly up to date on all school matters. School people believe that they ought to have a change in this office, and are therefore supporting Mr. Wieland.

Next Tuesday, November 6, will be the first opportunity the voters of Illinois have had to express approval of President Roosevelt and his administration. Every Democratic candidate is pledged to support the President and his policies; every Republican candidate is pledged to oppose them. The only way that citizens of Illinois can register their approval of President Roosevelt is to vote Democratic.

Farmers Offered 20 Cent Option On Sealed Seed Corn

Advance option payments of 20 cents a bushel, in addition to the 55-cent loans on corn under seal, can now be obtained by Will county farmers who have corn of seed quality and will agree to hold it exclusively for seed purposes, it was announced to day by Farm Adviser Leonard W. Braham.

The option contract to be offered to owners of sealed corn provides that the owner agrees to sell the seed corn to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at $1 a bushel on or before May 1, 1935. This option may be exercised by the AAA to acquire seed corn or, in the case of local demand, producers may obtain written authority to sell the corn to private individuals for seed use only.

In case of local sales, the 20-cent advance is to be repaid by the producer to the AAA, explains the extension service of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. If the option is exercised by the adjustment administration, the producer will receive settlement for the balance of the $1 a bushel purchase price above the amount of the 55-cent loan and the 20-cent option advance. This will amount to 25 cents a bushel, less the interest on the 55-cent loan.

Should the adjustment administration fail to exercise its option before May 1, the producer may retain the 20-cent advance, but will be under obligation to repay the balance due on his corn loan before the corn can be unsealed. Corn loans must be held by the Commodity Credit Corporation to be eligible for the 20-cent advance which will also be made through this agency. Applications for the 55-cent OCC loans and the 20-cent options may be obtained at the office of Farm Adviser L. W. Braham or from local banks.

Before corn can be accepted for the seed option, it must be inspected and approved as of seed quality by representatives of the administration, and options will be offered only upon required quantities of corn coming up to seed standards and held under storage conditions that will preserve its quality as seed.

It is believed that the option plan will conserve valuable seed stocks. Because such stocks can be held by farmers without storage charges, the seed can be distributed to needy growers more cheaply in areas where it is best adapted.

him a sound foundation for his trying task of administering the enormous volume of business now under his guidance in the Probate Court. Judge O'Connell is a member of the American, Illinois, and Chicago Bar Associations. With his wife and four children he lives at 3432 Bosworth Avenue.

Judge O'Connell Sets Fine Record

An increase of 80% in the number of deceased persons' estates closed, and of 33% in fees collected by the Probate Court of Cook County for the first nine months of 1934 as compared with the same period of 1933 is shown in the report submitted this week by Probate Judge John F. O'Connell to Emmett Wheelan, president, and the members of the board of County Commissioners.

Judge O'Connell's report points out that the Probate Court requires no direct levy on the taxpayer for its maintenance, but actually meets all its expenses from the fees collected and in addition turns over a large annual surplus to the County.

Following are the figures for the comparative nine-month periods:

	1934
Estates Probated	6847
Increase	537
Deceased Persons' Estates Closed	4022
Increase	1784
Fees Collected	$182,930.11
Increase	$44,400.25

	1933
Estates Probated	6310
Increase
Deceased Persons' Estates Closed	2238
Increase
Fees Collected	$138,529.26
Increase

From these figures it will be seen that although the number of estates probated increased less than 9% in the first three-quarters of 1934, there was an increase of almost nine times that figure in the number of estates of deceased persons closed during the same period.

It is estimated that a total of more than $8,500,000 has been distributed to legatees, heirs and creditors as a result of these closings to date this year.

The fifth man to be elected Judge of Cook County's Probate Court since its creation in 1877, Judge O'Connell is a candidate for re-election to that office and the direction of the largest court in the world presided over by one judge. He was elected Probate Judge, to fill the Horner vacancy, in 1933, when he defeated his opponent by 365,420 votes.

Before assuming his present office, Judge O'Connell spent 20 years in private practice and public office. As assistant state's attorney, and twice as a public official, while years of private practice, part of the time as master in chancery, enabled him to specialize in probate practice. Children Need Vitamins, Minerals Found in Fresh Milk

Judging from their happy smiles, Boots Mallory, popular Fox player, and this group of her young friends are enjoying their lunch on the studio "lot."

To help youngsters to understand the value of drinking milk regularly is sometimes a difficult job, but one that must be done if healthy boys and girls are to be reared. Often, as has been found by teachers and people who deal extensively with children, to appeal to their sense of reason is a good plan.

The next time you hear a child question the value of milk point out to him the very beneficial results that a baby derives from drinking milk. Explain that when a baby is born its legs and arms and back have no sturdy bones or muscles; that's why little babies have to be handled so carefully. Sturdiness must be built into the child and, as he is too small to exercise, the food given him must provide everything needed to strengthen him. Milk and fresh vegetables are the baby's main foods for several years. If these foods will do so much for a little new baby that has nothing to start with, one can readily picture what it will do for a boy who is strong, but needs to maintain his strength and health in order to take his place among his fellows. If the value of milk is suggested in this way the child might demur slightly, but before long he'll probably feel offended if his glass of milk is omitted from a meal.

Boys of high school age sometimes become very conscious of their complexion, especially if they are subject to pimples or blackheads. By pointing out the baby's petal-like skin gained on a diet of milk, fruit, and vegetables one can often show the bigger fellow just how his particular problem may be solved.

Girls of teen age are often embarrassed by red, splotchy skin. Such blemishes are danger flags signaling that the body is getting either too much of something or too little of something else. Because fresh pasteurized milk contains the essential vitamins, as well as the necessary calcium and phosphorus, it (along with plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables) provides practically all of the food elements that make for clear complexions, vibrant with color and good health.

With the present emphasis in beauty and fashion being placed upon simplicity and naturalness, the girl of today is placing herself behind the times when she seeks to cover up her skin rather than to expose it. Instead of seeking just the exact shade of powder and rouge to match the complexion, that complexion can be made to serve for itself. Not only will the skin and general health of the body be benefited, but the hair as well will show results by becoming more colorful and alive.

Of course, diet alone will not accomplish wonders; it needs the help of other healthful measures such as regular exercise out of doors, sufficient sleep in a room with open windows, and proper personal and dental care of the teeth.

You're The Loser

WHEN you allow Headache, Neuralgia, Muscular, Rheumatic, Sciatic or Periodic Pains to keep you from work or pleasure.

You can't go places and do things when you are suffering—and the work or good times won't wait for you.

Why allow Pain to rob you of Health, Friends, Happiness, Money?

DR. MILES ANTI-PAIN PILLS have been used for the relief of pain for more than forty years. They taste good, act quickly, do not upset the stomach, nor cause constipation, leave no dull, depressed feeling.

Thousands have used them for twenty, thirty, forty years, and still find that nothing else relieves pain so promptly and effectively.

Why don't you try them? Once you know how pleasant they are to take, how quickly and effectively they relieve, you won't want to go back to disagreeable, slow acting medicines.

I have been using Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills for thirty years. No matter what kind of pain I have, they stop it almost instantly. Never without them in the house.
Mrs.

You too may find quick relief. Why wait forty minutes for relief when Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills will relieve you in ten to twenty minutes?

As a household remedy I have never found anything that equalled Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills.

I never found anything that was so good to stop pain as Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills. I have told many about them and I find they are all using them.

Fully 85 per cent of the public school buildings of Illinois are in need of essential repairs and improvements in order to protect reasonably well the health and safety interests of pupils. This statement appeared in a report to Governor Horner by Dr. Frank J. Jirka, state health director, who bases his estimates on a survey of 41 school buildings located in 15 counties scattered throughout the state. To effect the necessary repairs Doctor Jirka recommended that school boards take advantage of financing facilities provided by the national housing act.

Joseph Levonian, one of five convicts who escaped from the McHenry county jail in Woodstock last July 8, has been captured and returned to the jail. Sheriff Lester Edinger revealed. Following the escape, Levonian made a brief but dramatic appearance on July 20 at the tavern of Charles Westlake, in the village of Solon Mills. Westlake had been a former partner of Levonian, and the latter was indicted for setting fire to Westlake's place, after they separated. Levonian suddenly appeared at the tavern, shot Westlake through the wrist, and again vanished.

The Illinois League of Women Voters made public a telegram urging the state civil service commission to certify for positions in the state employment service "those standing highest in the recent examination, without reference to temporary employees." The telegram was addressed to W. Emery Lancaster of Quincy, president of the commission, and was signed by Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, president of the league.

A total of 30,833 were in favor of a simplified, one-contract plan to become effective in 1936, with 15,100 against the proposition. Mercer county remained to be heard from.

Du Page county voters turned down a proposition involving a grant of New Deal money when they voted against a $500,000 bond issue, for the construction of a new courthouse and county jail at Wheaton. The proposal had been for a 4 per cent, 20 year issue, which would be used to secure a loan from the Public Works administration. The balance of the cost of the project would have been covered by an outright federal grant of $193,000.

JENNY WREN GOSSIPS ABOUT HUMMER

AS PETER RABBIT sat staring up at the tiny nest of Hummer the Hummingbird, which he had just discovered, Jenny Wren came along. Being quite tired with the feeding of her seven babies, Jenny was content to rest for a few minutes and gossip. Peter told her what he had discovered.

"I know all about that," retorted Jenny. "You don't suppose I hunt these trees over for food without knowing where my neighbors are living, do you? I'd have you understand that this is the faintest nest in the Old Orchard. It is made wholly of plant down and covered on the outside with bits of that gray moss-like stuff that grows on the bark of the trees and is called lichen. That is what makes that nest look like nothing more than a knot on a branch. Chatterer the Red Squirrel made a big mistake when he visited this tree. Hummer may be a tiny fellow, but he isn't afraid of anybody under the sun. That bill of his is so sharp and he is so quick that few folks ever bother him more than once. Why, there isn't a single member of the hawk family that Hummer won't attack. There isn't a cowardly feather in him."

"What Do You Mean by Pumping Food Down Their Throats?" He Demanded.

"Does he go very far south for the winter?" asked Peter. "He is such a tiny fellow I don't see how he can stand such a long journey."

"Huh!" exclaimed Jenny Wren, "dis-ance doesn't bother Hummer any. You needn't worry about those wings of his. He goes clear down to South America, where he has ever so many relatives. You ought to see his babies when they first hatch out. They are no bigger than bees. But they certainly do grow fast. They are flying three weeks from the time they hatch. I'm glad I don't have to pump food down the throats of my youngsters the way Mrs. Hummingbird has to down hers."

Peter looked perplexed. "What do you mean by pumping food down their throats?" he demanded.

"Just what I say," retorted Jenny Wren. "Mrs. Hummer sticks her bill right down their throats and then pumps up the food she has already swallowed. I guess it is a good thing the babies have short bills."

"Do they?" asked Peter, opening his eyes wide.

"Yes," replied Jenny. "When they hatch out they have short bills, but it doesn't take them a great while to grow long."

"How many babies does Mrs. Hummer usually have?" asked Peter.

"Just two," replied Jenny. "Just two. That's all that nest will hold. But goodness gracious, Peter, I can't stop gossiping here any longer. You have no idea what a care seven babies are."

With a jerk of her tail off flew Jenny Wren and Peter hurried back to tell Johnny Chuck all he had found out about Hummer the Hummingbird.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have just arrived in this country—my first visit here since 1903. Kindly tell me: When the prohibition law was passed was it a big surprise to the people?

Truly yours,

C. CAPTAIN.

Answer: I'll tell the cock-eyed world it was a surprise to the people. In fact, it took most of the people's breath away.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

In our town there is a burglar who is causing considerable trouble as well as curiosity. The police can't catch him. The report is that he travels around absolutely nude. What I want to know is this: What shall I do if some night I find the robber in my house and he is really naked?

Yours truly,

D. TECTIVE.

Answer: Cover him with your revolver.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Do you think it is possible to go 20 miles on a gallon?

Yours truly,

OTTO MOBEEL.

Answer: With the kind of stuff you get today some folks get to heaven on a quart.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I'm the fellow you hollered at last night in the automobile. I was in a hurry so could not stop to help you. I saw you and your wife slip and fall and also saw the lamp post fall over on top of you both. Sorry I couldn't stop to help you. How did you get out of your trouble?

Yours truly,

I. AUTO STOPPED.

Answer: We didn't slip. It was the wind which blew us over and also blew the lamp post over on top of us. I sent for the postmaster and he took the post office. (off us.)

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Will water always put out a fire? Yours truly,

N. SURANCE.

Answer: Not always. I know of a case where a man threw a match off the Brooklyn bridge and it lit on the water.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I hear you are a student of economics. I want you to advise me on one point. As an example, say that wheat was selling retail at $2 a bushel. Say a farmer sold 3,000 bushels of wheat to a wholesaler. What would the farmer get?

Yours truly,

E. KONOMIST.

Answer: He'd get an automobile. © the Associated Newspapers. WNU Service.

Washington hall in Durham, England, is likely to be sold for $2,000 and possibly pulled down. It is the ancestral home of the family to which George Washington belonged. Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of strong laxatives may do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels while nature is restoring their regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. At all druggists, ready for use, in big bottles.

Sometimes Seem Long

First—Do you work long hours? Second—No, only the regulation length—sixty minutes each.

For good digestion

—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect...it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions...and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemo-globin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices...so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important.

By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive...accumulative...and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion...sound sleep...and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

"Gerard!" Calloway shrugged his scorn. "You make me laugh! In the first place, suppose Gerard should stick to the proposition long enough to begin work—he won't, but we'll let it go for the sake of argument—where would he get a crew to log for him? There isn't a man in this town who would dare work for Gerard if I said 'No!'"

"What's that?"

The question rang like a pistol shot. Calloway shifted his eyes from the girl's face to stare-insultingly at the man in the doorway.

"I can't seem to take a step without running into you, can I, Gerard? Try to put me out of this house, just try! You won't catch me off my guard again. Perhaps you've appointed yourself Miss Schuyler's guardian, though?"

The sneering tone whitened Rodney Gerard's face. His eyes frightened Prudence. She took a quick step toward him. He shook his head. His smile was strained as he reassured:

"Okay. I shan't make a row when your brother is directly over this room. What do you want, Calloway?"

"What business is that of yours?" "It is his business!" Prudence turned to Gerard. "He came to warn me that if he did not cut my timber no one else should."

"Boy! So racketeering has struck this small village!"

Calloway's eyes retreated into their caverns. "Call it racketeering, it's all right with me. The fact remains that you'll be unable to hire labor if I say the word. I'll give you and Miss Schuyler one more chance. Think it over. Contract with me to handle your timber and I'll treat you fair. If you don't—" He turned away with a suggestive laugh.

"You've had our answer. I'll cut that timber. Try to stop me, just try!"

"Oh, I'll try." Calloway set his hat at a rakish angle.

"Think it over! Think it over!" he advised, before he banged the door behind him.

Prue's eyes were bright with indignation. "I felt as if little importance in that contest as a cheer leader without a megaphone, and I am supposed to be your partner. Can he do it? Can he prevent you?"

"Can he! Just watch me, girl, watch me. 'Down with the racketeer!' will be my battle cry. I have made up my mind to get out that timber, and when I decide to do a thing I do it. It will take something bigger than Len Calloway to stop me."

There was a disturbing light in his eyes and a vibrant note in his voice as he added:

"That isn't all I've made up my mind to do either, but it is enough to announce for a starter."

CHAPTER IV

Prudence Schuyler, in dark blue linen slacks and short-sleeved green shirt, knelt beside the border of the garden back of the red brick house. A shadow fell across the earth. She called over her shoulder:

"Fill that pail with sand, will you,

"Gerard!" Calloway Shrugged His Scorn. "You Make Me Laugh!"

Mr. Si? The directions which came with the lilies stressed the importance of a handful under each bulb."

She measured a hole with a short ruler in her white cotton-gloved hand. "Six inches. Correct." She sat back on her heels as a pail was set down beside her.

"Thanks lots. These lily bulbs will be but a voice crying in a wilderness of bare ground, but it's a start. Thank heaven for my imagination. Giant larkspurs, columbine, lilies in succession, hollyhocks, phlox, with wists and drifts of white gypsophila. Nice of me to treat you to a preview, isn't it? I'll make it a dream when my ship comes in and I can buy dozens of plants."

"No need of waiting for a ship to realize that dream."

Prudence looked up in startled surprise. "Just where did you drop from? I thought you were Mr. Si."

Rodney Gerard turned a bushel basket bottom side up for a seat. "You don't have to tell me that. 'Whatta mean is, you never favor me with such cordiality. But we won't go into that now.'"

Prudence dug at the earth with a trowel. She met his clear amused blue eyes with troubled brown ones. He was so darn likable. Almost he made her believe that a rich playboy might be honorable, might be true to that 'forsaking all others' clause in the marriage service. She demanded hurriedly:

"Why did you come? Is Calloway making more trouble for you? You really shouldn't have rushed him out of Mrs. Puffer's as you did the other day. He had as much right there as you and I."

"He was bullying you."

"What a fire-eater you are! You can't fight my battles."

"Can't I? I'll make a stab at fighting your timber battles. What are you doing? I know where you can get all the plants you want for this border. I know a place where they are throwing them away this minute."

"Throwing—this minute?" Prudence was on her feet. "Come on, lead me to it."

Gerard caught her hand. Started on a run. Out of the garden. Around the house.

"Is it far—I'll tell—"

"Don't stop for anything or you may lose them. Action, girl, action!" He pulled open the door of his roadster standing at the entrance to the brick walk. "Hop in!"

"But I must tell Macky or Dave where I'm going. Where am I going?"

"We're bound for High Ledges. The velvet moss. It was bordered on each side by trees. Their breath was resinous, their green was almost black, their height incalculable, their grandeur gave a sense of eternity. She gazed at them in awed unbelief.

"Do I own trees like that?"

"Hundred of them."

"Must those magnificent things come down?"

"Yes, for the good of the forest, I am told. The mature trees are taking the place of productive timber. Besides, there are a thousand bucks or more for you going to waste, so long as they stand."

"Practicality vs. sentiment. I'm not a practical person when it comes to beauty. I hear voices. Coming this way."

"The nurserymen."

"I'm going before they disturb the peace and beauty of this place."

"But the plants? Don't you want to select them?"

"Let the men save me anything they can spare. I shall love having them— from here." She looked down into the hushed garden.

"I don't know how anyone could be false or wicked with this heavenly spot to come to, Rodney Gerard."

He followed her along the trail, odorless of spruce and pine, dimly lit, throbby with unspoken thoughts.

"Go on to the roadster, Prue. I'll give the men directions about the plants. I won't be long."

Prudence glanced at her wrist watch as she stepped into the shining black car. Almost noon. David would think her lost. Some time he must see that heavenly garden. She would never forget it. It would help when she was engulfed in a tide of bitterness to think of the shades of husband and wife who perhaps walked there, hand in hand, in the dusky twilight.

"The idea, Miss Schuyler! Didn't they tell you that I was on the rear terrace, snipping off a few dead blos-

THE STORY FROM THE BEGINNING

Prudence Schuyler comes from New York to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, whose health has been broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, who lives at High Ledges on the neighboring farm. There is at once a mutual attraction between the two, but Prudence decides to maintain a cool attitude toward him. She suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway, a rival of Gerard, tries to buy the timber off Prue's land, but she dislikes his conceited attitude and contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. On the evening Prue is expecting David from New York she is visited by Mrs. Walter Gerard and her thirteen-year-old daughter, Jean. They are hateful, curious persons and leave Prue rankled.

nurserymen are there with bulbs and plant for the Glen. They always thin a lot of perennials—no reason why you shouldn't have them."

"Is that where—"

"Where my mother and father are buried. You won't mind going, will you? It isn't in the least depressing."

"Mind! Of course not. Mrs. Si has told me about it. She says it is beautiful."

"Mother planned it. I try to keep it as she loved to see it."

They drove the rest of the way in silence. As they passed the vine-covered stone and oak house, Prudence gave a fleeting thought to Mrs. Walter Gerard's reaction were she to see her on the place with her "butterfly" brother-in-law. Punctiliously she had returned her first call within the time limit ordained by etiquette, and had been overjoyed to be told that she was not at home.

Gerard stopped the roadster at the entrance to a dusky green trail. He led the way as it loped gently down hill. At the top of three boulder steps he stopped.

"Look! The frost hasn't touched it yet."

The sheer beauty of the garden below caught at Prue's heart. Such a garden! Regale lilies, crimson-spotted white; pink-tinted lilies; mammoth zinnias in pastel colorings; spikes of purple monkshood; plumes of pale blue larkspur, a second blossoming; snowy drifts of gypsophila; gladioli, pink, purple, mauve, white, amber, wine-red; clumps of Chinese forget-me-nots; sprays of pale yellow salpiglossis; tall dahlias, single, apricot colored. Water rilled gently over a ledge to tinkle into a fern-rimmed pool.

Rodney Gerard parted the ferns and crimson gladioli which almost obscured a bronze tablet set in a moss-grown boulder. She read the inscription. Whispered:

"How lovely! What profound silence! It sinks into one's soul. Can't you imagine the spirits of your father and mother walking here, hand in hand, in the cool evening? The place almost restores one's belief in faithfulness and love and—"

"There is faithfulness and love, Prue, lots of it. You only hear of the heartbreaks. You must believe it. I—"

"Don't! Please! Don't spoil it. Even the purple shadows cast by the moving clouds pass more softly here. How far does the forest stretch?"

"On and on to the Canadian line. We'll go back and I'll show you the direction in which The Hundreds lie."

A few feet beyond the top of the steps he stopped. "Your land lies to the east about half a mile from here."

Prue's eyes followed the narrowing perspective of a trail, carpeted with soms from the boxes, when you stopped at the house?"

Mrs. Walter Gerard had appeared as soundlessly as a wraith beside the car. The woman knew perfectly well that she hadn't been at the house, it was her way of making her feel like a trespasser, Prudence concluded hotly. She assured politely:

"It was a disappointment not to find you."

"But, my dear Miss Schuyler,"—Mrs. Walter winked—"did you really—?" She broke off as her brother-in-law appeared on the trail. "Rodney, why have the nurserymen come today of all days? I can't have the Glen disturbed. I am entertaining some garden clubs. I told you about it a week ago."

"Boy! I forgot! I'll stop them, Annie."

He sprinted up the trail. His sister-in-law called after him:

"I am expecting you to show my guests about, Rodney—" He disappeared in the dusky greenness without answering.

"Mother! Mother!" Jean dashed along the drive. "You're wanted on the 'phone. 'Portant."

"The idea! I hope it isn't a regret at the last moment, it might mean rearranging the luncheon tables."

Without so much as a word to Prudence, Annie Gerard fluttered toward the house. Jean dropped to the bank and regarded the girl in the roadster with her puckish eyes.

"I don't believe you've set your cap for Uncle Rod," she observed judicially. "What's setting your cap, anyway?"

Prudence shut her teeth hard to keep back a sharp answer. The child was merely repeating something she had overheard, something her mother had said probably, she wouldn't put it past her. Lucky she had said it, it would remind Prudence Schuyler of what constantly she was forgetting, that she was to treat Rodney Gerard with child disdain. She said lightly:

"Speaking of caps, I love that floppy hat of yours, Jean."

The child pulled off the frail pink straw and flung it to the grass.

"The milliner who sold it to Mother said it did a lot for me. She knew her sales talk all right. What's the use having pretty things if you never see other girls? Just because we're the Gerard's of High Ledges, Mother won't let me have the village children come to play with me. I'd like to be with someone kind of young."

Poor, lonely little soul. Prue's heart warmed to her. Could she help? Time she snapped out of self-absorption and thought of someone beside David and herself. But Jean was so unattractive. All the more reason to help her.

"Come and play with me sometimes, will you?" Prudence invited as cordially as she could with the memory of the child's prying propensity pricking. "I'm not very young, but there's heaps to do. Jane Mack will show you how to make cookies, and I'll teach you to use my tools—some of them—you can make a silver bracelet for your mother. Wouldn't you like that?"

Jean's usually pale face was radiant.

"That goes over big with me!" She called to Gerard who charged along the trail. "Oh, Uncle Rod, Miss Prue has invited me to come and play with her. May I go now?"

Rodney put his arm about the thin shoulders. "Not this time, K. K. I'll take you tomorrow. Be a good sport," he added, as the child's lips quivered. "You know your mother wants you at her party."

"Tomorrow, sure, Jean," Prudence called, as the roadster started.

"I was just in time to stop the men from digging up plants," Gerard remarked. "Forgot - Annie's party. They'll truck a load of stuff over to your garden tomorrow and set it out; all you need do is to boss the job."

Prudence suddenly remembered the refrigerating process to which she was committed. "But I can't let you do so much for me."

"Now you've gone icy again. Why shouldn't I send you a lot of worthless plants? Don't be pre-war. I've heard from Jim Armstrong."

"Who is he?"

"Didn't I tell you that I was importing a forester to advise us what trees to take out? He's a grand guy. You'll like him, he's just your type—but—watch your step, I saw you first, remember."

She looked up between long, sweeping lashes with a gay challenge. Then something happened. It was as if she had caught her spirit rushing toward him, caught it, and dragged it back into the strong-room of her will. There was a hint of breathlessness in her voice.

"Taking the broad view of the matter, why should I watch my step? Have I a free and untrammelled soul, or haven't I?"

"I was referring to your heart." Gerard's voice was not quite steady. "When Jim comes we'll take a look-see at your property. You ought to know something about it before we begin to cut."

"Is it wild?"

"Yes. There are old lumber roads grown up now, but we'll have those—I think the technical term is, swamped out—before we start; a sizable stream—used to be full of trout; and a log cabin."

"All mine?"

"All yours."

"How soon will you begin to cut?"

"As soon as Jim gets logging plans ready so that we may know what trees to take out."

"Will—will Mrs. Walter Gerard stay until you get through?"

"She won't be asked to stay. As soon as I know when Jim is coming, I will tell Annie that she and Jean are free to return to the bright lights."

Prudence visualized Mrs. Walter Gerard leaving her brother-in-law in the Maine wilds lumbering for a female neighbor in the early twenties! As the roadster stopped before the red brick house, Prudence mused aloud:

"Something tells me that your sister-in-law won't go."

"Won't go! Of course she'll go. What would keep her when I want the house to myself?"

Prudence made no answer.

Prudence, in a sleeveless white linen frock, stopped before the scoured pine table to regard proudly the shining jars of ruby beads arranged with the precision of an infantry squad on a mammoth white tray.

Andorrans Remain Poor to Save Their Treasures

Andorra, the Republic of the Pyrenees, has been preserved intact since the days when Charlemagne crossed the almost impassable mountains to aid in driving back the Saracens.

In 805 A. D., he gave to a handful of mountaineers, supposed to be Visigothic refugees, a charter for the valley of Andorra in return for the protection and assistance rendered to him and to his armies. Content with their mountain territory, they enacted laws and established a republican form of government. They built settlements, and called their small capital Andorra. When the passes of the Pyrenees resounded on all sides with the noise of war, the Andorrans tended their flocks and cultivated their fields, and observed a strict neutrality, which has never been violated.

Although the mountains inclosing the small country are rich in valuable ores, they have never been worked because the philosophy of the inhabitants teaches them that they must remain poor, so that other countries will not raid them for their treasures. For some reason they remain ignorant. Only one out of 100 can read. They are Christians, and have a few learned men among them.

Lesson for November 4

CHRISTIAN GROWTH

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:42-52; II Peter 1:5-8.

GOLDEN TEXT—But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and forever. Amen.—II Peter 3:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Was a Boy.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When Jesus Was a Junior.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How a Christian Grows.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making Progress in Christian Living.

1. Jesus Christ Growing (Luke 2:42-52).

While Christ was indeed divine, his deity did not interfere with his development as a normal human being.

1. Jesus tarrying behind at Jerusalem (vv. 42-43).

At the age of twelve a Jewish child took his place in the temple as a worshiper. He was considered a "child of the law." Being conscious of his mission, when Joseph and his mother were returning from attendance at the Passover, he tarried behind to enter the temple and inquire into the meaning of the ordinances of God's house. He had an alert and eager mind which inquired after the truth.

2. Jesus found in the temple (vv. 44-50).

When Joseph and Jesus' mother had gone some distance on their return journey they discovered that Jesus was missing, and therefore sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance. Not finding him, they turned back to Jerusalem, where they found him in the temple.

a. He was "sitting" (v. 46), was perfectly at home in his Father's house.

b. He was "hearing" the teachers of God's word (v. 47), was eager to learn God's will.

c. He asked questions (v. 46). The growing mind is inquisitive. It more than merely receives that which is taught; it goes out toward, it inquires after.

d. He answered questions (v. 46). His answers showed great wisdom, such as to astonish those who heard him. It was not an exhibition of his divine wisdom, but an expression of the workings of a perfect human mind suffused by the Holy Spirit.

3. Mary's complaint (vv. 48-50).

She remonstrated with him for his behavior. While he replied with dignity and tenderness, he made no apology, showing that he was more than the son of Mary—that God was his Father.

4. Jesus' obedience (v. 51).

Though he was conscious of his divine being and mission, he lived a life of filial obedience.

5. Jesus' development (v. 52).

a. Mental—"Increased in wisdom."

b. Physical—"In stature."

c. Spiritual—"In favor with God and man."

11. Growing in Grace (II Pet. 1:5-8).

This is not growth into grace, but growth in grace. We get into grace by the new birth. This new nature which has its source in God must be developed in order that our lives may be fruitful for God (v. 8), that they bear testimony to the cleansing power of Christ's blood (v. 9), and that we may have assurance of salvation (v. 10). The following lines of growth are indicated:

1. Virtue (v. 5) here means energy and courage. This is not "added," as in the Authorized Version, but "supplied," as in the Revised Version—"in your faith supply virtue." It means increase by growth, not by external junction. The graces named develop out of each other from the root of faith. Manly courage is the first virtue which must be supplied in order to grow stronger.

2. Knowledge (v. 5) means a right understanding. It means, therefore, a practical knowledge.

3. Temperance (v. 6) means self-control. Practical knowledge will supply to itself the government of all appetites.

4. Patience (v. 6) means endurance, having control of self within. Endurance of that without will follow.

5. Godliness (v. 6) means piety, reverence for God, the submission of the human will to the will of God. This is a part of that practical knowledge which must be supplied.

6. Brotherly kindness (v. 7). Love of the brethren must be developed in godliness. The proof that one is godly is that he loves the brethren (1 John 5:1).

7. Charity (v. 7) means love. Peter's climax is reached in love. Out of faith, which is the root, springs this seven-fold fruit. In order to prevent apostasy, Peter calls all to be diligent in the development of these graces.

Humility of Heart

Wait on the Lord in humility of heart, that thou mayest daily feel the change which is wrought in the heart and conscience by the holy, eternal, ever-living Power; and so thou mayest witness, "that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit."

An Absurd Thing

What an absurd thing it is to pass over all the valuable parts of a man, and fix our attention on his infirmities.—Addison.

Giant King of Grizzlies Dies an Inglorious Death

Joe, king of the grizzlies of the Flathead river country, recently died an inglorious death. This great animal, weighing almost 1,000 pounds, had been monarch of this region for years and native guides had always boasted that Joe was the largest living grizzly that roamed the woods. He was boss of his domain and sent other grizzlies and black bears scurrying to cover if they challenged his right to rule. Recently rangers in the Flathead district came upon the body of Joe in a little clearing of Salmon park. He had fallen victim to poisoned bait left for coyotes.

Just the Thing

A new war gas has been discovered which can be exploded by the heat of the hand. Fine! Give a flask of it to some of these warm hand-shakers.—St. Louis Star-Times.

THIS CHANGE gives Children a Chance

Perhaps you have tried nearly every sort of way to keep a child's bowels in proper condition, and failed.

Yet, almost any child who has been convalescing in a hospital, will usually come out with bowels working like a well-regulated watch.

The average mother gives any laxative the family may be using, while doctors give children a liquid laxative of suitable ingredients, suitable strength, and in suitable amount.

Make the change now to pure, California Syrup of Figs instead of harsh medicines, you risk no more violence to your child's appetite, digestion, and general physical condition. You'll have a safer, more satisfactory result, too. Those little upsets and complaints just disappear and the child is soon normal again. Try it!

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

Fount of All Goodness Kindness adds sweetness to everything.

ASK PAYMENT FOR STREETS

Although the State has paid a portion of the cost of paving in cases, the Highway Department has often taken over a street shortly after it was paved entirely at the expense of the local residents. The Department is authorized to make a refund to the municipality under these circumstances, and it has done so in many cases down state.

The Suburban Area and Country
Towns Association of Cook County asks that such refunds be made in every instance where a street paved by a City or Village has been taken over as a State Highway. Where paving was laid by special assessments, this would mean a refund to the owners of the property who paid such special assessments; and any expense which had been paid by the City or Village ut of its General Fund would be repaid to the municipality.

The Suburban Area and Country
Towns Association of Cook County has determined to work for the payment by the State of a refund to every City and Village, for the paying of any streets taken over as a State Highway, after the same have been paved by the municipality.

During the past few years the State Highway Department has taken over many streets within Cities and Villages of Cook County, and designated them as State Highways. When this done, the State then assumes primary jurisdiction over the Street, and the authority of the local officials is subordinate.
Traffic rules are made and enforced by the State Department, and in many instances parking by the residents who actually paid or the pavement is prohibited.

The next meeting of the Executive Committee will be held at 8:00
P. M., Wednesday, November 14th, at the Village Hall in Oak Park.
Every municipal official is invited to be present.

Steger Schools Close

The closing of the Steger public school affecting 621 pupils, is causing all districts to be concerned about their own schools.

Hampered by restrictive legislation and faced with a complete lack of funds, the Steger public schools will close on next Wednesday and will not be opened until satisfactory financial arrangement can be effected for the balance of the year. Recent unsound legislation is blamed for the condition.

Wab. Case Continued

Wabash railroad to do away with all tors.

News Among the Churches

ORLAND PARK M. E. CHURCH

(A Friendly Church)

Next Sunday will be "Christian Home Sunday." This is in accordance with a plan proposed by the Chicago Daily News, that such a day be universally observed by all churches, to give strength to house-ties by spiritual enrichment. Let it be a real family day in every church, with whole families sitting together to worship, renewing the commendable custom of our forefathers. Let it be the beginning of a campaign to enlist the membership for daily devotion about the fireside as the initial step toward the realization of the Christian home.
The pastor will bring a special message for the occasion and every Christian family is urged to attend church service next Sunday.
